Another

I stare at a face, across a forest
>
A challenging glint in my eyes
>
Hoping for her to stay and talk to me
>
Wishing that she would hear out my cries
>
>
She talks to me, true, but how sad is the fact
>
That all she talks to me about is him
>
That loathsome little boy, without friend or fairy
>
His mind sharp, his conversational skills dim
>
>
He owns her heart and knows it not
>
That little freakish looser priss
>
One day, he'll hurt her unknowingly
>
But one day, I know I'll hurt him for this
>
>
Why is he the one always chosen
>
For favors, for power, for a clean start
>
I once thought I owned all this forest
>
But now I realize I never held her heart
>
>
I will always wait for her to look
>
And see me as more than a friend/brother
>
But her eyes, her lovely emerald green eyes
>
Seem to always be set on another
>
